Cohesive Clusters:

Build yours in the areas that most interest you

Students will take at least three General Education courses in Arts & Humanities, Social Sciences and Quantitative Sciences, so make choices that reflect your interests.

If you are interested in Human Symbols, look at the descriptions of courses in Art, Music, Design, and Communications, and consider focusing your Arts & Humanities cluster in Theme 1.

If you are interested in Society and Culture, look at the descriptions of courses in Sociology, Political Science, Law, and Culture, and consider focusing your Social Science cluster in Theme 4.

If you are interested in the Built World, look at the descriptions of courses in Technology, Engineering, Entrepreneurship, and supporting fields, such as Math, Chemistry, and Statistics, and consider focusing your Quantitative Sciences cluster in Theme 9.

Tips for Registering for Courses

Build your schedule: You're in control

You have to register for classes during course registration timeframes, so your work schedule will have to fit around your class schedule.

Building your schedule is your responsibility

You are responsible to register for required classes and build a class schedule that meets your graduation requirements.

Prepare for registration

- Review the schedule of classes being offered this term.
- Refer to the course catalog that has course descriptions, including prerequisites.
- Know the requirements in your major (check your program's webpage).
- Know the General Education requirements <https://gened.aua.am/>.
- Consider the themes that interest you to plan your General Education breadth courses in cohesive clusters.

Know when you will register

Registration is open based on your standing (senior, junior, sophomore, freshman)

Review the email you receive from the Office of the Registrar to know the dates and times that you are scheduled to register.

Some courses have prerequisites and are based on your standing (e.g., Armenian History 1 is open to students who have completed Armenian Language and Literature 2 and have reached sophomore status, which means having completed 60 credits).

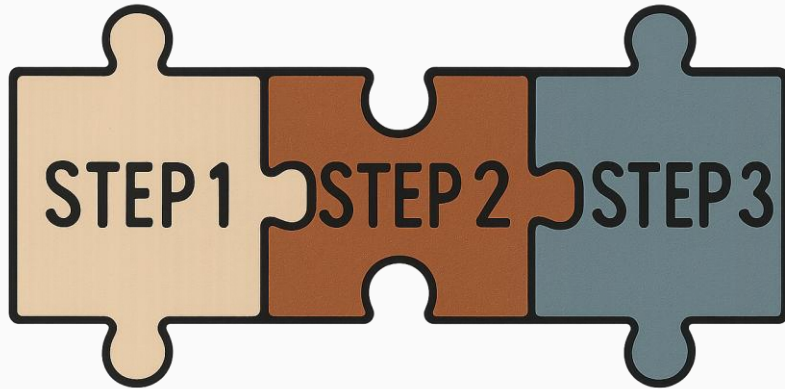

System glitches

System glitches may happen during the registration process.

Be patient. Try again.

If you experience an ongoing technical problem,
email icts-support@aua.am

How to build your schedule
